NOT QUITE LIKE EYRAUD.

Staten Island Thinks It Was the French Murderer's Body.

There is much mystery as to the identity of the suicide who was found dead on the Willowbrook road, at Staten Island, last Thursday night, with a bullet wound in the mouth and a five-chamber revolver by his side.

After many efforts at an identification of the body Coroner Wood is working on a theory that the suicide is Eyraud, the French stranger, who murdered Marshal Soufflot at Paris last July.

The suicide resembled Eyraud in several ways, and the master impressed the Coroner so much that he notified Inspector Byrnes, and waited until last evening before sending the body to the County House for burial.

Coroner Wood was seen this morning at his home in Port Richmond by an EVENING WORLD reporter.

The case is certainly a peculiar one," said he, "and one which the New York authorities should look into. The suicide appeared in Willowbrook on Thursday. He had a foreign accent. He said he had come over from Staten Point, and stopped in several saloons, where he drank soaks.

He left Willowbrook about 4.30 o'clock in the afternoon, and instead of starting in the direction of the depot, went the other way. A little later, he was discovered. The man was about forty-seven years, 5 feet 9 inches tall and weighed about 175 pounds. He had dark hair, a mustache, and was partially bald. He also wore a brownish gray mustache. Generally speaking this answers Eyraud's description.

The revolver which he used was of the "Marquis of Lorne" pattern, and was an old one, having been made in England. It was at the bottom. At the instant Monday night the witnesses said the man spoke with a French accent.

One of the witnesses, named Dryer, who lives out on the road, exhibited a picture of Eyraud, and said he thought the suicide was the man who had been tracked half way across the earth.

There is a striking resemblance between the suicide and the picture. The eyes and the nose are alike, and the general appearance is the same.

The suicide, however, was more bold than the picture. He was a man of middle age, looks the extraordinary large and strong hands which Eyraud is said to have possessed.

Coroner Wood added that he had notified the New York Police, but having received no reply, he had sent the body out to the county farm for burial.

TERRIFIC POWDER EXPLOSION.

Marquette County, Mich., shaken as by an earthquake.

ESPECIAL TO THE EVENING WORLD!

NEGAUNEE, Mich., April 23.—Fire broke out in the mill of the Anthony Powder Company last night, and shortly after 9 o'clock the whole mill blew up with such terrific shock that Marquette County was shaken.

Stores and houses in the immediate vicinity were badly shaken, fronts being blown by windows broken and considerable other damage done.

At Marquette, eleven miles from here, the explosion was heard far off, many thinking it was an earthquake.

At 11 o'clock the fire was still raging, though some of the packing-houses of the Company were destroyed.

As far as can be learned, but one person was killed, that being the night watchman at the powder mill.
